MRS. SCHRAM'S THIRD GRADE

Project Based Learning

Our third-grade teacher is known for her project-based learning. Whether it's a Camp Read-a-Lot, Starbucks Day math learning, or engineering structures that can withstand a mini earthquake, you can guarantee our third graders are learning not only concepts but how they relate to the real world.

Social and Emotional Learning

Not only are our third graders learning your normal math, reading and writing, but they also start their days off with social and emotional learning lessons that will help them throughout their academic career. These lessons may include perseverance, kindness, or good sportsmanship.

Ask Our Teachers:

What is the most exciting part of teaching a middle grade?

"Middle grades are where you see the shift to using the knowledge learned to being able to apply it. I enjoy having students apply what they learn in class to real world scenarios through project based learning." - Mrs. Schram
